English Professor PAUL BORGMAN, a specialist in biblical narrative, is also the author of David, Saul, and God: Rediscovering an Ancient Story (Oxford, 2008) and Genesis: The Story We Haven't Heard (IVP, 2001).

“Borgman begins with the premise that modern practices of reading the Gospel of Luke and the book of Acts separately — and, even worse, reading isolated pericopes instead of hearing the two volumes read aloud as a single work — mask the true genius and significance of Luke’s project. . . . Borgman presents a readable and accessible study of Luke-Acts. It is that accessibility, along with its conciseness, that distinguishes Borgman’s treatment from those of his many colleagues on whose work he draws and whose various perspectives he synthesizes in a single volume. . . . Despite his emphasis on reading (or hearing) Luke’s two books as a single narrative, Borgman’s analysis of the various constituent units (down to individual pericopes) is clear and fresh. . . . He discerns a chiasmic structure of the journey narrative (Luke 9:51–19:44) that demonstrates the literary and thematic integrity of that important section of Luke’s Gospel. Even if it stood alone, that section of Borgman’s book would be worth the price of the whole.”

— Sharon H. Ringe in Catholic Biblical Quarterly

“In this exploration of Luke’s literary art, Paul Borgman displays his significant gifts as sensitive reader and trusted guide. Although fully engaged with contemporary study of Luke-Acts, he is no slave to ‘the experts’ as he demonstrates again and again how Luke’s narrative works to shape our grasp of Luke’s literary and theological agenda. Biblical studies is the richer on account of this sort of interdisciplinary work.”

— Joel B. Green

author of The Theology of the Gospel of Luke

“We need more books like this, where something more substantial can be provided to the general reader in a responsible, well-thought-through, and passionate manner.”

— Review of Biblical Literature

“Borgman’s work is easy to read because of its clear structure; he addresses it to exegetes as well as to students and interested laypeople.”

— Theologische Literaturzeitung
